Cause Related Marketing

GOSPEL CENTER
RESCUE MISSION
over 75 years of restoring lives

“The possible benefits of cause marketing for nonprofit organizations include an increased ability to promote the nonprofit organization's cause via the greater financial resources of a business, and an increased ability to reach possible supporters through a company's customer base. The possible benefits of cause marketing for business include positive public relations improved customer relations, additional marketing opportunities, and making more money.”*

“Any marketer who’s not a novice can recall when terms like “cause-related marketing” and “corporate social responsibility” were exotic novelties. But now it’s a given that consumers believe companies have obligations beyond making money for their owners. In fact, it is getting more difficult for a company to connect with customers and prosper if it doesn’t stand for something more than its bottom line.” **
